EMPLOYABILITY THROUGH ENTREPRENEURIAL SKILLS

By using new methods in educational strategies, we hope to prevent young adult's exclusion from society and provide them with conditions for employability. To help encourage these unmotivated young adults, the participants of this course will learn and apply new skills regarding methods of informal learning, group processes, and social skills.

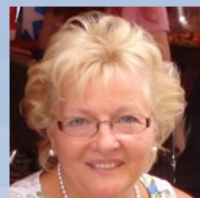

The course will give the participants knowledge, experience, and understanding of young adults' current interests, and therefore how to coach them to make a permanent and internal change in attitudes, thinking, and behavior. The participants will share "best practice", as well as taking part in discussions, workshops and seminars.

co-founder of two companies, scientist at Linköping University, inventor of his own smartphone application for depression treatment and successful DJ. But the road to success was far from evident for a boy raised by immigrant parents with no schooling of their own. Hoa Ly didn't even know what university meant when he started high school.

Lecture: Using your Valued Direction to Guide you to Success.

Niklas Laninge

Niklas Laninge works at Idea factory. The Idea factory works with concrete, hand-on tools to make people better at generating new ideas and working with them. They also focus on the group dynamics behind a creative environment.

In the lecture/workshop Idea Factory, we will dismiss the "artist myth" - that creativity is a gift of the chosen few, like a divine inspiration. On the contrary, all psychological research points to the fact that creativity is something that everyone possesses, and that it is a skill that can be practiced.
