

Brīvības / Liberty Square and Fountain

For more than 600 years the square has served in a capacity of the Market Square, where farmers from near and far came to trade, along with fishermen from the nearby seaside villages, as well as the local craftsmen. However, until year 1990, as it was generally supposed to be, the central square of the city was the host of Lenin's monument. Nowadays, the square is arranged with benches, splendid flower beds and a water fountain. It's a popular place for festivals and also dating.
